Wenatchee Engineering Firm Brings Two More to Town

WENATCHEE, Wash. Nov. 10, 2016 – The population of Wenatchee grew by two with the addition of RJ Lott and Kevin Farrell to local engineering firm, SCJ Alliance.

RJ is a senior planner and Kevin a design engineer for SCJ, a consulting firm specializing in civil engineering, transportation planning and design, environmental and urban planning, landscape architecture and design, and public outreach.

RJ is an urban planning graduate from the University of Utah and worked for more than 13 years for Benton County in the Tri-Cities before relocating to Wenatchee for the senior planner position. Kevin moved over from the coast, most recently hailing from Forks, Wash. He graduated with a degree in civil engineering from Northern Arizona University earlier this year.

“The Wenatchee area has so much to offer potential employees,” said SCJ Engineering Manager Dan Ireland. “The town sells itself!”

Dan, a transplant himself, said the firm’s Wenatchee office is an attractive alternative for those who want to work for a dynamic, multidisciplinary firm and enjoy an active outdoor lifestyle. “SCJ is an amazing firm that provides diverse opportunities,” he said. “Getting to do so in a place like Wenatchee is a dream for a lot of us.”

SCJ has provided the expertise behind many endeavors in the Wenatchee region, including the design of the new Crescent Bar Island Recreation Area, Miller Street signal projects, and now the new WSDOT North Central Region Administration Facility.

Other current, high-visibility efforts include trail and roadway improvement projects in Winthrop, Twisp’s downtown revitalization, and community planning efforts in Entiat, Rock Island and Grand Coulee.

Celebrating a 10-year anniversary this year, SCJ has grown steadily from three employees in one location, to a dynamic team of more than 85 employees in five locations: Seattle, Vancouver, Lacey, and Wenatchee, Washington and Denver, Colorado. SCJ Alliance, a nationally-recognized firm, was founded in 2006 and in the last 12 months was the recipient of two top places to work awards.
